

Security Through Obscurity

by Pandiculator

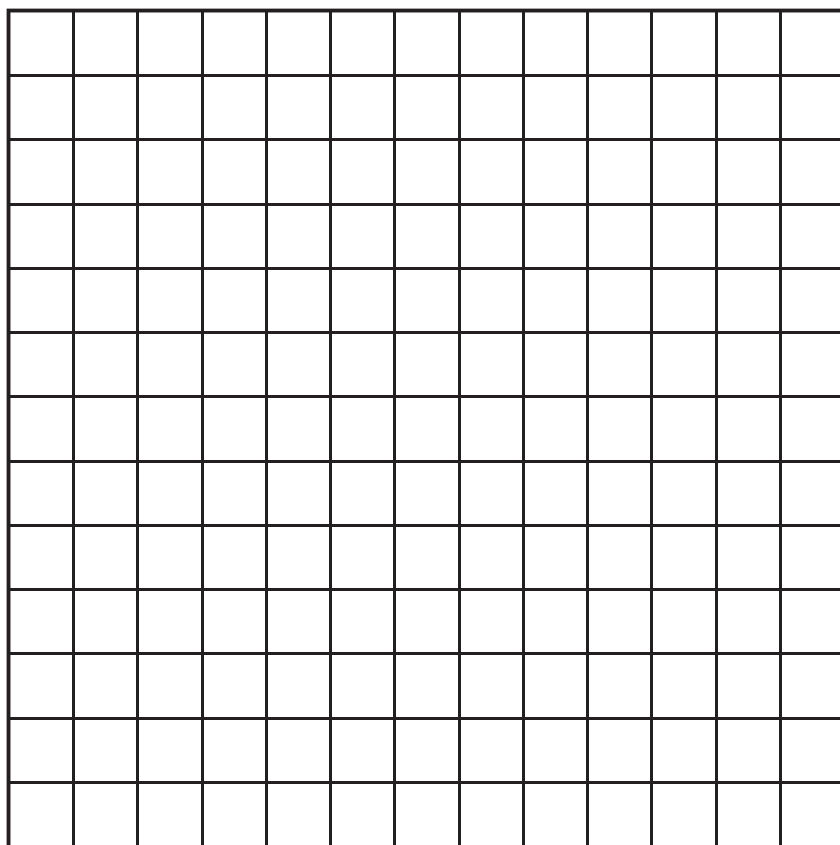

Pandiculator is not good at remembering his password for the Magpie website, so decided some time ago to encode it within a puzzle.

Unfortunately, as well as now having forgotten his password, he's also misplaced the puzzle's preamble and blank grid. He does have a hazy memory that all clues contain an extra word to be removed to enable solving and that the 180°-symmetrical grid is 13×13. He only has a list of clues and two scraps of paper containing lists of words on each.

Solvers must establish the password and write it on the entry sheet.
